BISHOP ELIAS MORRIS.

When people read in Tuesday morn-ing's papers that 'cishop Elfas Morris had met with a most acrious accident, by fulling down an elevator shaft, they were fearful that it might prove fatal. Yesterday their fears were realized, for Bishop Morris died yesterday morning at 10:20 o'clock. His death robs the city of a most familiar faure, and the THE HERALD COMPANY. city of a most familiar figure, and the state of a most valuable and enterprisneers of the state, having come to this city in 1932; and ever since that date he has been identified with the state and its building up. EDUCATE MORE OFFICERS.

The United States could readily place a great army in the field, so far as men are concerned, but they would not be soldiers for some time, though the best of material out of which to make sol-diers. A first requisite to the making of soldiers is officers, and the country identified with an enterprise to found a best sugar factory in Utah the year he came here, and he was the president of the first sugar factory erected in Utah—the Lehi factory. No man in the state has built so many smallers as he ber of graduates from the military scidemy at the present time is scarcely sufficient to supply the demand for the army as constituted today. There were many brave and gallant officers in the civil war, but the great generals, the men who mapped out the great camtion, his work being first what was men who mapped out the great cam-wanted, and as honest as they day is build and developed the grand long. And the work he did for other mining companies was equally as satisshould be so, for they had all had the wherever Elias Muris did work it was bighest military education. Washington Star: Much fun has been poked at many southern citizens because of the large number who were called colonies, and it has been estimated that in some sections of the south more colonels returned from the war than entered the service during the cuttre four year. When it is remembered from what triffing circumstations a coloniciatin could be evolved there is no need to question how and in what manner the tile was bestowed by our sguthern friends.

A reporter for the Star late in 188 was directed to make some inquiry as to an item of news sent to the paper. After a moment's thought, the reporter became certain that if the news was true it would be known to a certain man. This person, though a strong Union man, was physically unable to bear arms.
